Testimonial from a Parent

In November 2008, Inge of Vancouver, BC was faced with the prospect of her son, Max, being held back a grade because of his failing math grades. “This Fall, I realized that Max had missed a full year of math instruction due to scheduling conflicts the past year and was now failing.” Wanting to help Max catch up to his class, Inge turned to SchoolTutoring’s tutoring programs to get the academic help Max needed. With Max’s dedication, he was able to turn his failing Math grade of 28% into an A- on his re-test taken in February,

Max began working with his SchoolTutoring tutor on a regular basis. With regular reviews of his tutoring sessions and the tutor’s feedback on Max’s progress, SchoolTutoring’s Academic Directors guided the tutor on how to accelerate Max’s progress even further. Inge believes that it was the consistent reinforcement from regular tutoring sessions – made possible through the convenience of SchoolTutoring’s tutoring – that made all the difference for Max. “With the help of SchoolTutoring, Max is able to practice concepts over-and-over again.” Inge credits the convenience of SchoolTutoring’s availability with being able to get help right before a major test and credits SchoolTutoring’s programs for facilitating the booking of back-to-back tutoring sessions whenever Max needed a boost before a major school test.

“Students, especially those who get left behind academically are often shy about asking for help.. Effective learning happens when students can learn without being embarrassed about their current proficiency.”

Beyond the convenience of SchoolTutoring’s tutoring programs, Inge is pleased that Max feels so comfortable being tutored in the comfort and privacy of his home. “Students, especially those who get left behind academically are often shy about asking for help. Effective learning happens when students can learn without being embarrassed about their current proficiency.”
